A FORAGING EXPEDITION OF ONE MAN IN THE WINTER OF 1863.

Long Knew the Country and Also Human Nature, For His Little Bluff Worked Uncle Joe, Who Was "Cap'u" Then, Liked His Chicken Done Brown.

"It was a wretched night back in 1868," said Uncle Joe.

Uncle Joe's stories of the war were things to be looked forward to and remembered. He had served during the entire four years as a commissioned officer and knew whereof he spoke, having and Platonists, who represented all an excellent memory and an inimitably humorous way of telling the adventures of himself and his men.

more plainly speaking, the visiting of the soldiers doing picket duty at their different posts. We were on short ra tions, and every man of us, officer or private, longed for a good, square meal to brace him up against the raw, damp coldness of the night. As I was about to spring into my saddle a low voice at my shoulder said: "Cap'n, how would a supper of chicken and honey taste?"

'I swung hastily around and beheld the speaker. He was a fellow called Lang, one of our most valuable spies, and in some respects a mighty claver fellow, but in—oh, well, I'll let it-gc by saying that his moral nature had never been overdeveloped. He was a short, thickset man, with twinkling black eyes and otherwise the most thoroughly impassive face I ever looked It was said of him that he would slip into the butternut suit of the rebel and make himself much at home in He was hall fellow well Loo's army. met with all the men and came back to the Union lines possessed of the most invaluable information. He had experienced thrilling adventures and was a man of intrepid courage.

"Cap'n, he repeated as he stood be-side me that cold night, how would # supper of chicken and honey taste? "Excellent, Lang, excellent, I re-plied, thinking of our limited supply of smoked west and hard tack. 'Have " 'No, put I might get some, I reckon, if I looked round a bit, 'he drawled, lazfly kicking up clay with the toe of his boot. I saw immediately that he meant to go out of camp, find a farmhouse and help his elf. Such things are not un-heard of the army.

" 'Nonsense, Lang,' said L 'You would be killed sure if you went. The pickets are on extra sharp lookout to night, and it's altogether too dangerous You would never come back alive. "With that I sprang into my saddle and rode away, followed by my men. We were gone two or three hours, making the rounds of the pickets, and a more miserable ride I had seldom tak en. I was chilled to the bone and hun gry and my men likewise. As I rode back toward camp the glow of a bonfire in a remote corner caught my eye, and I immediately turned my weary horse toward it. Before the crackling heap eat Lang, calmly frying chicken, while at his side reposed a hive of honey. Ha looked up and smiled grimly.

"'Supper's most ready, cap'n,' he said, touching his apology for a cap. 'Make yourselves to home, gentlemen. "Lang,' said I sternly, 'didn't I tell

'No, cap'n,' he replied as he continued to cut up the plump fowl in his hand; 'you didn't say I couldn't go, al though, if I remember correctly, you didn't exactly advise it on the score of its being dangerous, but a man what's led the life I have ain't goin to let a little thing like that stop him when he's hungry,' and he held toward me the plump leg of a chicken nicely

"Lang,' said I, 'tell me how you

'No very great matter,' he replied proceeding with his culinary art. 'When you'd gone, I walks along quiet to the outpost and finds a picket walkin up and down like he owned the earth, so l flops down on my stomach alongside a fence. Bein a dark night, as it is, Mr. Picket comes along and don't suspect that fence so of much as harborin a mouse. Minute he gets half a rod away over that fence I goes lightninlike and takes a scoot into some woods close by and then goes about my business," "Go on, ' said I, with my mouth full of chicken and honey.

"Lang continued: 'You see, I know this country mighty well, so I makes tracks for a farmhouse close by where they keeps plenty of chickens. When 1 opens the gate to go in, along comes a dog. Well, cap'n, that's the only dog I ever met with that I couldn't either scare or make friends with. No, sir, that dog wouldn't take no stock in bluffs, so I whips out my revolver and lays him out. At that up goes a window, and a man begins to yoll to find out who's there. "Put your head inside that window and keep it there, or I'll knock it off for you," says I "Now Jim," I continues, "you just watch that window, and if the fellow sticks his head out don't wait to be ceremonioaslike, but just fire. I'm goin to get some chicken and honey." Course there wasn't no Jim along, but that fellow in the house had to be kept out of the way; so, being a dark night, I tust bluffed him about there being more then just me around. You bet he keeps his head inside, and I goes to the chick en house and helps myself to some plump young codgers, and takin a beehivs Utah. on the other shoulder makes tracks for the camp the way I come.

"There's luck in odd numbers" is a saying as old as the hills. As ancient a writer as Virgil says the gods themselves esteemed the numbers odd, for in the wighth eclogue he wrote:

Around his waxen image first I wind Three weeden fillets of three colors joined; Thrice round his thrice devoted head, Which round the sacred attar thrice is led— Unequal numbers please the gods.
